TO RUTHERFORD B. HAYES

Memorial to the Distinguished Christian Statesman President.

Committee's Report, Written by Col. W. C. Starr, Adopted-Poem by Mrs. Starr-Trib-1 utes by Mr. Fishback and Others.

The memorial service in memory of ex-President Rutherford B. Hayes, under the auspices of the Indiana Commandery of the Loyal Legion, of which he was commander in chief, was held yesterday afternoon in the lecture room of the Plymouth Church. Among the members of the Legion present were Gen. R. S. Foster, Gen. George F. McGinnis, Col. Oran Perry. Admiral Brown, Col. J. B. Black, Captain Scott of Ladoga, Dr. Thompson. Major Zollinger of Fort Wayne, Captain Earley, Capt. W. H. Armstrong, Recorder Peck. Capt. Horace McKay, Capt. J. T. Layman, Dr. Woollen, Capt. W. H. Armstrong, Capt. J. L. Brown and Capt. J. W. Wittsett, Among the citizens present were ex-Governor Chase, W. P. Fishback and J. B. Elam, ex-Mayor McMaster, T. M. Bassett, W. R. N. Sylvester, H. P. Hood. Chaplain Lucas called the meeting to order, and ex-Governor Chase offered prayer. After a few appropriate remarks, he called upon Rev. Dr. Haines, a member of the commandery, to read a memorial prepared by a committee composed of Col. W. C Starr, Adjutant John Lee Yaryan and Major Ostrander, of Richmond, prepared, it is understood, chiefly by Colonel Starr, who is unable to leave his room, having had his hip broken some months since. The memorial is as follows:

It is hard to bow with resignation to the stroke of death that took from us our beloved Com-mander-in-Chief. Did we not believe that the Great King doeth all things well, the spirit of puny rebeliton would fain put out its hand in opposition; but it is better, as we say him away under the snow, to count the days of the years age of three score and ten, that crept upon him, is also creeping upon us. The country has produced but few men whose lives were so beautifully rounded out in all qualities that go to make up a man. As a boy, he was a leader of boys, and the pride of a widowed mother who believed in him. As a man, he went not in the paths of the ungody, but with an ambition to attain the utmost of his possibilities, he strained every nerve for the accomplishment of that end.

When our country's flag was fired upon by traitors, he sprang forward among the first to defend it. With a warm but hasty farewell to wife and children, he gathered together a company of his friends and led them, as their capbecame a part of the Iwenty-third Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry. Without drill, they were pushed into Virginia, to become victors in the first battles of the war. Promotion began at once; be was first made a major, then neutenantcolonel, then a colonel's eagle served him until 1864, when, while command ng a brigade amidst the horrors of the 19th of October, on the bloody field of Cedar Creek, he was made a brigadier There were brave men there that day, but none more brave than General Hayes.

When the last armed foe had surrendered at Appointation he returned again to embrace the loved ones at home, but here new fields opened to his view. While leading his brigade in Virginia, he was elected to represent his district in Congress. Before his term expired he resigned to accept the office of Governor of his State. A second and a third time did the people of Ohio honor him with their suffrages. We all remember the stirring times of 1876, when it required the utmost wisdom and forbearance to avoid an event second only in importance to the great rebeilion itself. During the whole period there was not the slightest ground for be-lieving that General Hayes sought, in the remotest degree, to influence the action of the Electoral Commisson which declared him elected to the presidency. Accepting this, the highest position within the gift of the people, he promptly set about putting in force the principles laid down in his letter of acceptance. In thus, with Spartan courage. obeying his convictions of duty as the official head of a great nation rather than the head of a great political party, he was sometimes under the necessity of disregarding the advice of political friends. Their displeasure did not deter him from going straight ahead with what he believed to be right, although their defection often hampered him in the accomplishment of his purposes. Yet, in all, self-government was restored to the South, specie payments were resumed, civil service was rescued from annihilation and the national debt was refunded at a low

No candid man of whatever party will fail to acknowledge these beneficent and patriotic serv-ices during this dangerous period of reconstruction, nor the purity of purpose that graced every act of his public career. Released from the cares of state, he sought repose under the shadows of the oaks of Speigel Grove, at Fremont, O. At the side of a wife distinguished for her nobility of character, surrounded by children that did honor to such parents, in the midst of books of careful selection he enjoyed the happiness of a careful selection, he enjoyed the happiness of a home adorned with love, intelligence and re-

Companions, we mourn not the conventional sorrow usual on these occasions, but, as children, we suffer the heartache of bereavement. Our Nation mourns, but bows submissively to the decrees of Him whose ways are past finding

A defender of our flag has been called home. He had no thirst for military fame, but drew his sword to preserve a nation's liberties and to set the bondman free. Firm in discipline, yet those whose duty required him to punish, leved him. On the long weary march, the soldier, fainting under his heavy knapsack had his burden lifted from his back and tied to the commander's saddle, or was himself placed therein.

His scars attest his courage on the field of bat-tle, yet was he never drawn into reckless exposure of person to win applause, or when such would serve no good purpose. In civil life his outstretched arm was ever leading in work that would promote the welfare and happiness of his fellow man. The prisoner in his cold and lonely cell, the unfortunate, whether from appetite, disease or unfortuous circumstances, the widow, the orphan, the ignorant and even the depraved drew upon his sympathies according to their needs. Every fibre of his great soul was wrapped in a tissue of tenderness. He was not callous, but keenly sensitive to the arrows of adverse criticism by disappointed place hunters, but conscious rectitude lifted him above resentment; and that page of his record remains spotless from the fact that he sought the greatest good to the whole people.

In the world, and of the world, whatever he was or was not, few men during the last two decades so impressed themselves upon history, upon civilization and upon the hearts of his contemporaries. His amiability and open-handed courtesy were conspicuous points of his char-acter, but these were never tarnished by obsequiousness or loss of dignity. Standing on the summit of earthly honors, he drank the applause of his countrymen at every turn of his pathway during the closing years of his life; yet, in the quiet of his soul he turned and "with the grasshopper sung his evening

His greatness was not the flash of the meteor racing across the sky, but the steady light of living, operating truth. The immortal Lincoln will forever stand at the top of the roll of statesmen developed by the re-bellion, because of his anointing by Almighty God. Morton won laurels as a leader in the hour of trial; untimely death shortened their days of usefulness and glory. The lengthened years of Hayes were filled with enthusiastic service in the cause of learning and humanity. He did not write his name on the sand washed by the waves or drifted by the winds, but on the hearts of a people of a great nation; and of his virtues will we speak to our children for their emulation.

We have laid his form by the side of his be-loved wife on the wooded shores of Lake Erie, and as we turn away to our homes, let us not hink of them as sleeping there under the snow green sods, but as arm in arm in the bright alls of the "mansions not made with hands" eeting kindred spirits gone before.

"I know that I am going to where Lucy is," re sweet and fitting words to close the lips at will be heard no more forever.

Rev. Mr. Lucas read an appreciative Pem written by Mrs. Starr. Addresses were made by ex-Governor Chase, who gave an idea of the beautiful home-life of the ex-President. Hon. W. P. Fishback spoke of the high character of his administration, giving the country specie resumption and confidence—beginning in the middle of business prostration and ending in a period of prosperity. He also referred to the home-life of the ex-President, saying that it was perfect, and that perfection is the best part of a man. Captain Scott, of Ladoga, bore testimony to his wisdom as a statesman, and his consistent, pa-triotic life. Hon, J. B. Elam spoke of him se one of the men whose life and service was a contribution to the true greatness of he Kepublic-one of the men whom he felt a pleasure to pay tribute to because it was deserved. Colonel Holloway gave a number of personal reminiscences, showing his fidelity to his convictions and his friends, among which was one to the effect that he had it in his mind to have made General Joe Johnston Secretary of War-a proposition of General Sherman. Col. J. B. Black spoke of the rare felicity of his public addresses, and of his charming person-ality. Rev. Dr. Lucas spoke of his ability. which consisted as a rule, in doing the vote, and the meeting ended with a bene-diction by Dr. Lucas.

Captain McKay said that those who met him in recent years were impressed with his nobleness of character, and impartial history will give him a place among those who have rendered the Republic the most useful service.

The stars and stripes and myriads of brilliant lights smiled upon a gay body of men in the Columbia Club rooms last night, the occasion of the annual banquet, in commemoration of thebirth day of Washington. A large number of the members of the order were present, together with their invited guests. Previous to the banquet the annual business meeting was held, at which presided Gen. George F. McGinnis. It was the unanimous opinion of those present that the wives of the members should be permitteed to partake of the delicacies enjoyed by the Legion each year, and a motion to invite the ladies to the next banquet carried without a dissenting vote. It was also proposed that the birthday of Lincoln be adopted by the organization as a date to be observed hereafter, instead of Feb. 22. Immediately after the business the entire body repared to the supper room to feest upon the same transmission and the same tran per room to feast upon the sumptuous bill of fare prepared, Major S. B. Saylor, of Fort Wayne, presiding. Among the after-dinner speeches contributed was a new version of the "Battle of Gettysburg," by Major Chase, of Logansport, late of the United States army; a paper on "Washington," by Mr. Allan Hendricks, also by Col. W. E. McClean, of Terre Haute. Dr. Thompson, of this city, also delivered a short address. A pleasing feature of the evening was the excellent selection of songs rendered by the Bald-headed Glee Club. Among the guests of honor were Lieutenant-governor Nye, Admiral Brown, of the United States navy, Senators Boyd, Magee and others.

PROHIBITION POLITICS

Indiana State Voters' League Succeeds to the Tattered Mantle of the Prohibs.

Temperance Conference Yesterday Developed Slick Politics and a New Party Was Born-Resolutions and Permanent Organization.

Some two or three hundred people, of both sexes and all ages, assembled at the Y. M. C. A. Hall yesterday morning in pursuance to a call issued some time ago for the organization of a permanent body among the temperance workers of the State. The call originated in the adoption of resolutions at the meeting of the Indiana Presbytery, at Bloomington, last fall. They were to the effect that the voting element of the temperance workers of this State, and all other States, needed concentration to give it a working effect. Accordingly Rev. Samuel Sawyer, Rev. J. A. Pollock and Mr. J. G. Kingsbury were appointed a committee for the purpose of assuing a call for a State Christian Temperance Council. The result was seen in yesterday's assemblage. The large auditorium of the building was used, and it was filled nearly to overflowing. The proceedings partook of a semi-religious, semi-political and wholly of those assembled was to form, if possible, s new independent political party-one that shall not declare its allegiance to any other party without first receiving assurances from it that it will stand, first and last, on the temperance question as is desired by this new body. It expects to gain enough members to its ranks to hold a balance of power in the State, and then to be able to go to the big party and say to it: "We are with you if you shut up the saloon, and if you do not we will go over to the other side." There was no provision made for a plan to be pursued in case the other side also refused to be influenced, but such a possibility was not, perhaps, considered probable. The local leaders of the Prohibition party were all present, and took an active part in the proceedings, as did othere from out over the State.

The morning session was called to order by the Rev. J. A. Pollock, one of the com-mittee issuing the call for the meeting. Prayer was offered by the Rev. H. A. Tucker, of Crawfordsville. The election of a permanent cha:rman resulted in the selection of Rev. Rice V. Hunter, and Sumper W. Haines, of Portland, was selected as secretary. The first business was the selection of a committee on resolutions, on which the following-named gentlemen were placed. W. W. Borden, New Albany, chairman; ex-Governor Chase, Eli F. Rit-ter, Mrs. L. M. Beck, J. P. Vogue, B. F. Cavins and C. M. Van Anda.

During the time that the committee spent in preparing the resolutions, the delegates listened to a series of five-minute talks in which many of those present expressed their views on the best plan to be pursued in the new party which they were about to organize. Among the speakers were Rev. Mr. Tucker, Rev. Mr. Sawyer, Rev. Z. T. Sweeny of Columbus, Rev. W. F. Taylor and others. They were about united in believing that the reason that the prohibition movement in the past had been a failure was the lack of concentration, and that the present efforts must be such as to do away with that fallacy. It was proposed to request every church of every denomination in the State to urge its members to join this movement, and by that means to get out the working and vot-ing force of those interested. The report of the committee as adopted was as fol-

Lawlessness and enterprises and business dangerous to good government, such as pool-seiling, gambling, evil resorts, saloons and others of bad effect and influence upon public morals and well-fare, must be suppressed by law and its enforce-

Official disregard of duty in the observance and enforcement of laws must be condemned Economy and fidelity in the administration of public affairs must be secured. For the purpose of accomplishing the end contemplated in the foregoing declaration of principles, and to save our government from threatened anarchy and ruin, we do hereby organize the Indiana State Voters' League, upon a voters' We do hereby solemnly pledge and bind ourselves together not to vote for, nor in any way support any person for any office, State, county, township or municipal, who does not publicly promise faithfully to observe and use his utmost influence and ability to enforce the laws, and to the extent of his opportunity seek to promote the ends sought to be accomplished in the fore-

The afternoon session was opened by a prayer by the Rev. D. R. Van Buskirk. A committee was appointed to draw up articles on a permanent organization, It was as follows: Rev. Wood, Greencastle; T. C. Newlin, Kokomo; J. A. Pollock and E. M. Goodwin, Indianapolis.

It at once adjourned to an ante-room, and the convention in the meantime was addressed by Rev. J. A. Kynett, of Philadelphia, chairman of the Methodist temperance committee of the General Conference. W. G. Hubbard, of Columbus, O., and others.

At the evening session the committee on permanent organization reported a constiand ordered printed. The constitution provides that the organization shall be called the Anti-liquor League of Indiana. All voters of the State may become active and all nonvoters may become honorary members of the league by signing the constitution. Provision is made for auxiliary leagues in each county in the State, and in each township in the various counties. The following officers were elected for the year 1893: R. V. Hunter president, J. C. Rynerson vice president, E. M. Goodwin secretary, C. E. Newlin treasurer. The members elected for the executive committee were J. A. Rondthaler, L. J. Kirk-patrick, W. W. Borden, D. M. Wood and

RECOGNIZING A BRAVE ACT

The State's Medal, Voted by the Legislature, Presented to Richard Neff.

His Heroic Act at the Peru Wreck Eulogized by Senator Newby, Who Makes a Timely Plea for Recognition of Acts of Bravery.

The medal ordered by the Legislature to be presented to Richard Neff, the Lake Erie & Western fireman, for distinguished services and endurance at the Peru wreck, was presented yesterday afternoon, at halfpast 4 o'clock. The presentation was made by the joint committee of the Legislature, of which Senator Newby, of Henry county, was chairman. The medal is of solid gold, and cost $100. It is suitably inscribed. Mr. Neff's family and a few of the neighbors witnessed the affair. As Senator Newby was about to hand the medal to the recipient, who is still weak from his injuries, he

Mr. Neff, as the representative of the General Assembly, acting on behalf of the State of Indiana, I wish to present you with a token of the appreciation and esteem in which the people of the State hold you and your act of bravery and heroism displayed at the late wreck. The acts of sublime patriotism so often displayed on the field of battle by those who were striving to save the Union have so filled the hearts of the American people that we have been remiss in our duty and slow to recognize acts of bravery when performed elsewnere. I have been taught to be-ueve that we should ever acknowledge deeds of valor performed by those who marched to the front at the time our national life was in danger as crowning acts of glory, to be honored above all things, and to remain first in the hearts of the people; but while we are doing this we should not lose sight of the fact that among that large and ever-growing class. the laboring people of the country, there are almost daily occurring acts of bravery and fidelity to duty that should challenge the admiration of all mankind. It too often happens that fidelity and devotion to duty are accepted as matters of course and deserving of no praise. Especially is this true as regards the railroad employes of the land, who are charged with the greatest responsibilities and are held to the most strict account for their acts. How thoughtless has become the general traveling public, knowing that, if any one of the many employes of the railroad should become negli-gent and fail to perform his duty, destruction and death would be the result; yet the fact that such employes are daily performing acts of bravery and devotion to duty that should crown themlas heroes is allowed to pass by unnoticed, unmentioned and unappreciated-accepted as a mere performance of duty and is not considered. I maintain that the true heroes of the country at this time are the railroad employes. Who ever heard of an engine ever going through a bridge, or over a precipice, without the lever being reversed yet the world in its lethargy, when some poor man risks his life to save life and property, gives but a passing thought and the act is allowed to sink into ob-livion without recognition. But we believe that the world should become awakened to the fact that true heroism may be found among those who are bound by reason of their positions in life to follow as well as among those who are selected to rule and govern.

When on the morning of the 20th day of January, 1893, the press heralded to the world that on the night previous a passenger train, laden with its human freight, had gone through a bridge into the Wabash river at Peru, Ind.; that a freight train was following that would, if no signal was given, be precipitated into the river upon the wrecked passenger train, causing havoc indescribable and fearful to contemplate, there was one man who rose Phænix-like out of the wreck, one who, amidst all that excitement and death, was mindful of his duty, although maimed and bleed ing, came to the rescue at the peril of his life; and in a manuer that should cause the heart of every true man to glow with esteem and pride that indiana had produced such a hero.

We believe that such acts should receive substantial recognition from the State; we, therefore, present you with these resolutions, and this badge, which we hope that you and your children after you will ever keep as pleasant mementos, resting in the knowledge of the fact that you are the first civilian that was ever presented with a badge for bravery by the State of Indiana, and we hope that these mementos will not only be valuable to you as a reminder that you did your duty in time of great danger, but that you may hold them as certificate of character from the State of Indiana, testifying to your heroic character and fidelity to duty. Mr. Nett was very much affected by the gift and broke down in tears as he expressed his gratitude to the State, the Legislature and the committee.
